"Will it help if I nibble your ear?"

'He's just being friendly!'

Randy nag takes a bit of a fancy to unfortunate Irish policeman – as you can all see!

YOU HAVE to feel sorry for this poor chap. He may go on to have an illustrious 30-year career in the Irish Garda and foil robberies and kidnappings by the score, but he'll only ever be remembered as "that fella the horse tried to shag". This unedifying scene unfolded at Dublin's Smithfield Horse Fair last week, where the nag clearly took a bit of a shine to him. An impressive, 22in, fully erect shine, in fact. At one point in the scramble, it even bonked his chum on the head – a move that we believe is known as "The Tulisa".

"Please god,
tell me that's a stirrup I can feel?"

"I only went out for a paddle!"

'It's behind you!'

Pro-surfer tackles deadly wave!

COULD THIS be the most humongous wave ever ridden?

Surfing experts reckon so. This astonishing snap was taken in Teahupoo, Tahiti – notorious for its deadly waves. The brave (or barmy) soul is 37-year-old pro-surfer Nathan Fletcher, swallowed up by the watery monster just moments later. The Californian wave rider reportedly said that he had to check his head was still attached to his body afterwards!

A full-page photograph of a massive, curling ocean wave. The water is a deep, vibrant blue, and the crest is white with foam. A surfer is visible on the face of the wave, positioned towards the left side of the frame. The surfer is wearing dark clothing and is in a crouched position, riding the wave. The overall scene conveys a sense of power and adventure.

A word with rider Nathan Fletcher!

Hi Nathan! Are you addicted to big waves?

I'm definitely always itching to surf big waves. I need the adrenaline! But you have to focus on little waves to get flexible. Big waves come easy if you can surf little ones.

Is it an exciting time to get into surfing?

For sure! There are so many kids getting into it, it's hard for me to keep up, but I like seeing the kids do tricks and getting radical! The industry has bred all these kids but some of them are actually doing some cool stuff.

What do you hope to achieve next?

To be the surfer who does it forever, as long as I can, for the love of it! I don't want to have the ego of a big-wave surfer or a small-wave competitive surfer.

A quick word with Tim Vine!

The pun-filled comic on Nuts, punnets and brand-new Not Going Out!

Hi Tim! Not Going Out is a very conventional sitcom. Are you surprised by its success?

I thought you were going to say, "Are you surprised how conventional it is?" I don't know if I'm surprised. I think the success is down to the writing and that credit doesn't land at my doorstep. That's Lee. We came out when the mockumentary Office-style sitcom was very in vogue. There was probably room for a sitcom with lots of jokes in it.

Would you be any good in a sitcom with no actual jokes in it, like The Office or Life's Too Short?

I think I'd be alright but I think I'd probably be unable to stop twinkling at the camera. I'd say, "Excuse me," run out the room, shout some punchlines and come back in again.

What's it like on set? Are you and Lee Mack forever trying to put each other off?

Most of it's trying to remember lines. We get the lines on a Monday and have to recite them on a Friday in front of an audience. It's never a long enough amount of time. We do occasionally get the giggles and you see people the other side of the camera going, "Come on, we have to get on with this." It's like being at school.

Your character is called Tim and Lee's character is called Lee in Not Going Out. Are you really that bad at remembering your names?

It'd certainly be more confusing if I was called Lee and he was called Tim. If you mean if we were called Cyril and Bert, I think we'd cope.

The last time we met, we got you to make puns out of the Nuts Questions Bucket...

I remember. I was in my local branch of WH Smith and the manager said, "I saw something very funny in Nuts the other day," and showed me that picture of me holding up that sign that said, "Hey Nuts, I wouldn't want to be in your cashews." I thought, "Ha!" I laughed at my own joke in WH Smith!

What's the most unusual object you've made puns out of?

I was on a chat show and the guy said to me, "I'm going to give you objects and you can make puns out of them, but I'll tell you what they are beforehand," which I thought was a bit of a cheat. He handed me these things and I was doing jokes and the audience were probably thinking, "Ooh, that's clever." Then he threw in one extra which was a punnet – one of those things strawberries come in. I couldn't think of anything so I just put it on my head and said, "Hello." He went, "It's a punnet, isn't it?"

Your jokes are usually quite short. Did you invent them with Twitter in mind?

Certainly not. If I tweet everything I think of, no one will come to see me live!

Or you could do a Twitter gig?

I suppose I could. The problem is you couldn't hear the laughs. People tweeting back, "Ha-ha-ha-ha-ha!" isn't as nice.

John Bishop did his five days of hell and David Walliams swam the Thames and English Channel. Would you pull out a bike or pull on some trunks for Sport Relief?

That's about all I would do, yeah. I'd pull on some trunks for Sports Relief. I'd do one leg on the Thursday, have a rest day on Friday and do the other leg on the Saturday.

Nuts* once met you and you had all the whole of your Jokeamotive tour written down on one piece of A4 paper. How many pieces of A4 paper does your new show, The Tim Vine Chat Show, take?

Well, I bring people out of the audience and chat to them so I don't really need any pieces of paper. People arrive and there are pieces of paper on the chair, "If you want to be interviewed by Tim, fill in these details, what's your name, what's your occupation and name something ridiculous that has happened to you." A guy brings them back to me in the dressing room, I choose six, I go on and it's a bit like Parkinson... well, not exactly. I go, "Please welcome my first guest, he makes rowing boats and his name is Arthur Spangles." And I interview him.

You should team up with Derren Brown. He could pull people out of the audience, tell him all about themselves, and you could make jokes.

Yes. It's controversial. I think his are all plants.

Or he's looking them up on Facebook. Unbelievably, you once appeared on a celebrity version of Total Wipeout. How did you get on?

There were about 20 of us. Fatima Whitbread, who is super-fit, did it first. Joe Swash did it second and went across like a whippet, like his feet weren't touching the ground. I was third. You know Andrea McLean from Loose Women? She said it was like watching Big Bird doing it. I didn't do it with much elegance!

Billions of volts of angry lightning hits terrified US city!

GOD MUST have been exceedingly grumpy with Albuquerque, New Mexico, last week. Maybe he'd had a bad burrito. Maybe he'd hit too many bogeys on the internationally renowned Twin Warriors Golf Club. Either way, the big man sent some of his best wrath to bear over the city in a sustained, 11-minute attack of electricity, snapped by tour guide Roch Hart. "Realising the potential I ran to the roof, stationed the camera on my tripod and began taking photos," Roch said. "Someday I hope to travel the world, capturing lightning," he added, wistfully.

GAME MODES!

We played two game modes on two maps. "Domination" was a simple territory capture set on a submarine dock. "Firestorm" was a new mode, set in the rubble of a ruined temple.

Far Cry 3 first play!

Nuts gets buttons-on action with the shooty multiplayer!

THE NEW Far Cry campaign looks like a bullet-chewing masterclass of tropical insanity and paranoia.

But unusually, the multiplayer option – created by Swedish studio Massive – was ready to look at first. So that's what we did. The game's out on next-gen games machines on 7 September.

BATTLE CRIES!

There's one special power-up you can activate that gives nearby pals health bonuses so they can run faster, that sort of thing. Activate Battle Cries and you get "Team Support Points".

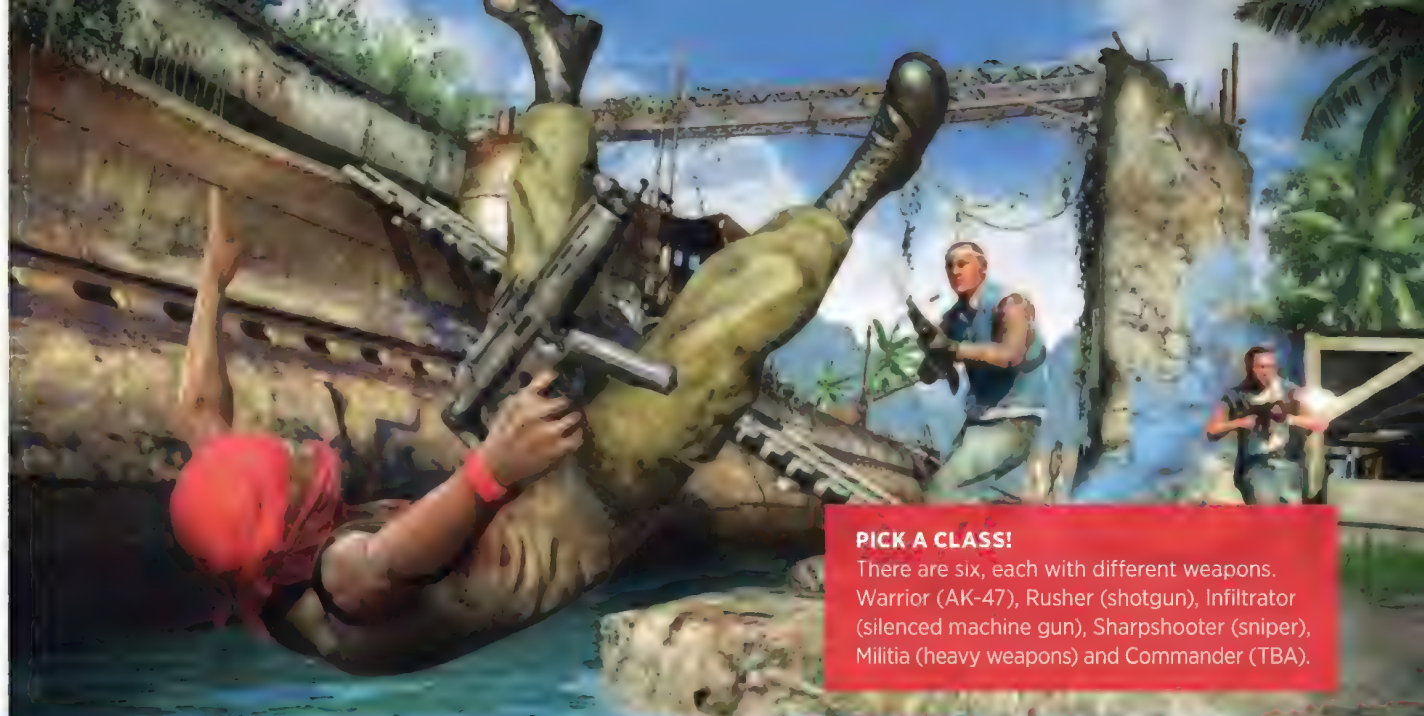

KILL CAMS!

When some berk offs you, there's a really cool revolving 3D "kill cam" showing hot bullet trajectories. Also, you can decide whether to get revived as you can see how hot the area is.

TROPICAL PARADISE!

We played the game in a man-made jungle!

PICK A CLASS!

There are six, each with different weapons. Warrior (AK-47), Rusher (shotgun), Infiltrator (silenced machine gun), Sharpshooter (sniper), Militia (heavy weapons) and Commander (TBA).

FIRESTORM!

Teams fight to set fire to two fuel dumps. Do it in time and a radio antenna becomes active. You then fight for that. If the defenders win, a plane dumps water. Lose, and it's gasoline.

TEAM SUPPORT POINTS!

Key to multiplayer success, these give you access to "Team Support Weapons". Best is "Psyche Gas", which makes every player resemble a demon enemy, with friendly fire off.

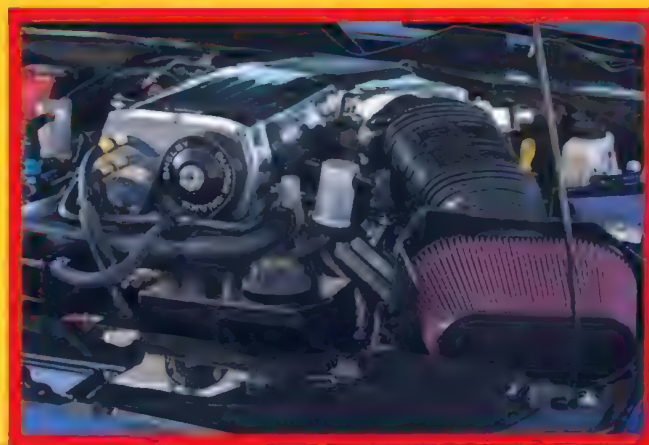

937bhp Shelby Cobra!

It's an American muscle car with just 50 horses less than a Bugatti Veyron!

- Exactly 50 years ago, Texan chicken farmer (ex-test pilot and handy racing driver) Carroll Shelby decided to build his own sports car. He imported and sold the British AC Ace, but decided it would go faster with an American Ford V8 instead of the British straight-six motor.
- The iconic AC Shelby Cobra was born, a future with Ford fused, and the rest is history. Shelby's name is as legendary as the Ford Mustang itself, so when he unleashed his spanners on the best-selling Pony car, it was always going to be impressive.
- As a celebration of the Cobra's unveiling at the 1962 New York motor show, the most mental production Mustang of all time will be debuting at this year's event as you read this.
- It's called the Shelby 1000, but all you need to know is that it's witchcraft in a trucker hat. Somehow, old man Shelby and his gang have wrung 937bhp from a (relatively) tiny 5.4-litre Ford V8 – an engine that's usually sold with 550bhp.
- These approaching Bugatti Veyron levels of grunt have been achieved largely thanks to an XL-sized Kenne Bell supercharger. Shelby also tore down the engine and replaced the cams and valve springs, machined out the cylinder heads and improved the cooling system. Which means 62mph in 4.0 seconds and a top end of more than 220mph!
- And apparently, 937bhp is on the conservative side, which explains why there's the option to order a very un-road legal "1000 S/C" version with 1,085bhp.
- Brakes are important when putting the heavy foot to a 1.7-tonne motor, so the 1000 wears jumbo pasty-sized six-piston front calipers and four-piston rears – clearly visible through thoroughly special edition forged-alloy, 11in wide, 20in diameter rims.

The wall was making
Car feel queasy

- Shelby only changed the 1000's looks in the name of function. So, there are new bonnet heat extractors, a front splitter and rear diffuser, made from the tuner's preferred carbon fibre.
- It might seem weird that this car is essentially a company's gift to itself, but there aren't many blokes who a) have had a profound impact on the world of loony fast cars, and b) are still alive to tell the tale. It's yours for £125,000 – and only 100 will exist, so be quick.

Inside out animals!

German turns fauna into morbid art!

➔ YOU MAY be aware of Gunther von Hagens. The German anatomist has spent the last few years "plastinating" dead people in the name of art – stripping the skin away and presenting what's left in challenging new ways.

Now it's the turn of the animals in new exhibition "Animals Inside Out", doing what it says on the tin. But no dogs – what kind of sick monster would plastinate a dog?

● Animals Inside Out at the Natural History Museum runs until 16 September.

The "back, sac and crack" wax took off more than planned

"I'm too sexy for my skin, too sexy for my skin"

The penalty for losing the National was severe

"Gentle Ben never had to do this!"

GORY GUNTHER!

Von Hagens invented plastination way back in 1977, opening his German institute in 1993.

Von Hagens joined Damien Hirst on the sharks' sh*t list

What's going on?

The art of plastination – turning animal cells into a robust plastic material

- First, decay is halted by pumping formalin into the body through the arteries, killing all bacteria.
- The skin, fatty and connective tissues are then removed to prepare the individual anatomical structures.
- The body's water and soluble fats are then dissolved by placing it into a solvent bath. Something like acetone.
- The specimen is then immersed in a polymer solution and placed in a vacuum chamber. This removes the acetone and helps the polymer to penetrate every cell.
- The body is then positioned and hardened with gas, light or heat.
- Each specimen takes about 1,500 hours (about a year) to create.

Tight squeeze!

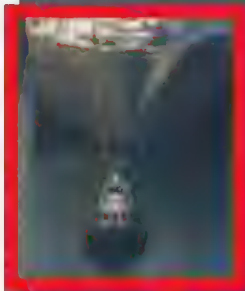

Passenger ship braves the Corinth Canal. Breathes in.

BELIEVE IT or not, this is an everyday event for tug boat captains of Greece's Corinth Canal.

The 6.4km waterway allows tourist ships less than 16.5m to squeeze through behind a tug, saving a 700km detour.

This captain's probably Italian. Being pulled by a tug is probably the only work Italian ship captains can get these days.

Corinth Canal facts

- The canal was first mooted in classical times, and the first attempt to dig it happened in the first century AD. Emperor Nero first broke the ground in 64AD.
- At its shallowest point, it's only 7.3m deep.
- The canal was cut at sea level, so there are no locks to navigate.
- Around 11,000 ships use the canal every year.
- It's hardly a breeze to navigate. Its high rock walls channel high winds down its length and the different times of the tides in the two gulfs cause strong tidal currents.

"Cop a load of the horse!"

IN IRELAND, during a recent horse fair, a horse was caught on film trying to fk a police officer (see page 4). That's right, a horse tried to mount a cop and fk him with his 22in c*ck. If you watch the clip, the cop tries to resist at first but then seems to get into it. Now, if there are animals out there that want to fk us, you could say that there's an argument in favour of bestiality. But at the end of the day, this incident was still pretty unnatural – nobody should want to fk a policeman. If the Muppets have taught me anything it's that only a frog would want to bang a pig.

"Don't sweat about it!"

MARKS AND SPENCER have invented the sweat-free shirt,

"Ice cream prices go up!"

I UNDERSTAND we're all worried about the price of petrol, but we've got bigger problems – ice cream prices are about to rocket after the worst crop of vanilla pods ever. Personally, I don't care, as I'm lactose intolerant and ice cream makes me sh*t myself. Now, vanilla pods are mostly grown in South America where all the crops are being ruined this year. So, guess what other product is about to become more expensive? Mind you, when I snort enough of that, that makes me sh*t myself too.

a shirt that contains chemicals that prevents wet pit-stains. I hate this sh*t. Why can't we just accept that people stink and stop trying to cover it up? We all cake ourselves in perfumes, deodorants, use mouthwash and Odor Eaters – it's not natural. I dream of a day when I don't have to use any products, or even wipe my

"A next-gen Beatles?"

THREE OF the children of the Beatles are apparently planning to form a band. James McCartney, Sean Lennon and Dhani Harrison are all said to be involved. But Ringo Starr's son, Zak Starkey, who has drummed for Oasis and the Who, won't be joining them, as he already has a successful career. Really, who would have ever thought that Ringo would have the most talented kid? Let's just hope that Mark Chapman didn't have any kids or Sean Lennon's fked.

"A fond farewell!"

THIS WILL be my last column for Nuts, so I'd like to thank everyone at Nuts for the support they've given me. There aren't too many UK magazines that would pay a guy from Australia to write jokes every week about fat people, prison rape and things being stuck up people's arses. Thank you all, and g'day!

'I could feel my ear flapping!'

Lack of a scrum cap leads to lack of an ear!

➔ THIS SEMI-DETACHED organ belongs to Nuts reader James King, who went in for a tackle during a rugby game and ended up with a little bit more than a bruise.

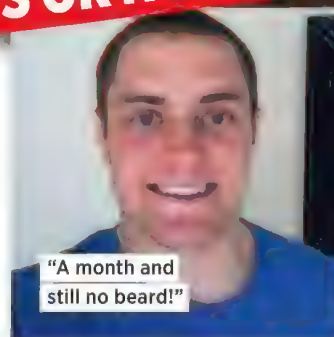

"I was playing a game of rugby when someone stepped in off the wing and I tackled him," 21-year-old professional rugby player James recalls. "I felt a bang on my head, I got up on one knee and saw that there was blood coming down. I thought I'd cut my head. It didn't hurt but it felt like getting banged on the ear on a cold day."

James ran across the field to the medical area for treatment after being told to come off by the physio, against the wishes of his team-mates. "I got back in the defensive line and I could just feel my ear flapping," explains James.

James had to undergo plastic surgery to reattach the ear but was back on the field just six weeks later, only wearing a scrum cap this time.

Groaning in her sleep!

I was woken up by my girlfriend groaning in her sleep the other night. She mentioned the name Wayne and was clearly enjoying herself. It's happened before and I've never said anything about it. We don't have any friends called Wayne. Should I bring it up with her?

SIDNEY Stoke

I wouldn't say anything if I were you, Sidney. Wayne could be anyone – a former boyfriend, pop star, Rooney or just a name she likes. And next time she groans in her sleep and is enjoying herself, join in!

She's wild about sex!

LETTER OF THE WEEK!

Obsessed with Becks!

My lady is obsessed with David Beckham. We've been together a couple of years now and she's always trying to get me to wear the same gear as Becks, get my hair done like him and so on. Now she wants me to get tattoos like him. I really don't want tattoos. What should I do?

MENDY Sheffie d

Oh dear. She seems to have a fixation on Mr B. I think you're striking the right balance – clothes and haircut are alright but draw the line at tattoos, unless you can get away with removable transfers! You could put one on your c*ck spelling out "Beckham". Could be interesting.

Even when I'm totally exhausted she won't take no for an answer. What should I do?

DICK via email

I assume you've already got all the accessories that would take some of the load off you? If it's still causing problems then you need to do something about this. Maybe you should hire some chaps to stay on standby to help you out. Then, when you've had enough, give one of them a call while you sit back in a comfy chair with a chilled drink and a book.

His new girl is annoying!

My mate's new girlfriend is a pain. She goes everywhere with him – she even manages to "coincidentally" show up on designated lads' nights out. The final straw came last week at the footy, where she spent the whole game complaining. How do I tell him to sort it?

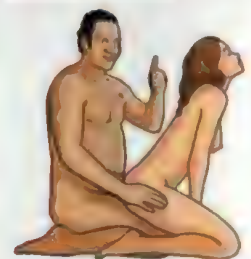

JOHN via email

You need to be firm and make it clear that some things are men only. It sounds as if the lady really likes hanging out with men. Maybe she's hoping for a bit of group action? Ask her. Actually, maybe not.

- If you've got something to ask Danni, just email her at thelesbian@nutsmagazine.co.uk or write to her at the usual address on p70.

DANICA

Danica!

Derby's finest is back in Nuts!

Hi Danica! What's new with you?
I've been horse riding and playing polo – people think it's posh, but it isn't any more.

What's getting you excited at the moment?

I'm going to Miami soon – I love it in America. They make a fuss of British girls because they have a very set idea of what we're like – the "English rose" sort of thing.

They must love you out there!

They're always like [puts on American accent], "Do you know so-and-so from London?" They think we all live next door to Buckingham Palace!

What do you have planned for the summer?

I'm not sure. Hopefully it'll be a nice, fun, chilled summer.

What sort of look should British chaps be rocking this summer?

I'm not into overly cool outfits or the preppy look. I like a chap to have a classy look – keep it plain and fresh.

Do you like tattoos on a bloke?

They don't bother me at all, but I don't particularly like them either. Some people look amazing with them though.

Who are your heroes?

My dad and my twin sister. They really are my heroes.

Do you and your twin sister ever play pranks on people?

We're not identical so it's hard to trick people in that respect, but our voices are identical so we play pranks on the phone.

Are you into footy?

No. If I were to pick any team, though, I'd be an Arsenal fan.

Thanks, Danica! Finally, are you a "wild night out" or a "cosy night in" kind of girl?

I'm a night in kind of girl. My box-set of choice would be Desperate Housewives or Sex And The City.

PHILLIP SCHOFIELD

Telly legend Phillip Schofield on Joey Barton, Gordon the gopher going into rehab, and holding in a wee!

Hello Phillip! The Cube is back on TV. Is it the best series yet?

I think so, yes, because we do have someone who actually beats it this time – Mo Farah! We've got some new games, too, and we've got some big winners and big losers.

Talking of losers – be honest, some people on The Cube are hopeless. How do you not laugh?

It's actually quite tough on occasions and some things do have to come out of the edit! I can remember saying to one lad recently, "I've never seen someone so useless." He couldn't walk in a square! But you have to take it seriously, as it's a lot of money for people going on the show. Occasionally, there are people who are utterly rubbish but that makes for a very entertaining show.

Have you had a go at any of The Cube tasks yourself?

Yes, I've tried a few. My favourite is throwing the ball through the sugar glass game – but I've never actually had a go on that one because if I did smash everything, then they would have to sweep it up and start again, which takes time. They actually gave me the perspex cylinder construction game to take home with me, as they needed to get a new one. So, when we have the occasional drunken evening at home, we'll get it out and see if anyone can actually build it under pressure.

You're a Twitter legend. Why haven't you had a row with Joey Barton yet?

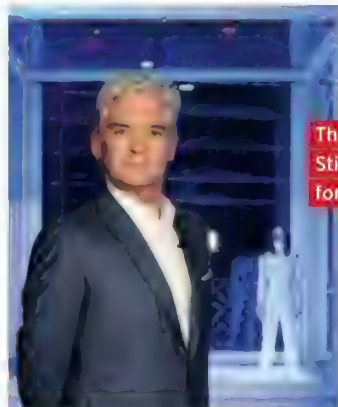

I don't know who he is! A footballer? Then that's probably why. I'm not a massive football fan.

Alan Partridge mentions you a lot in his audiobook, and he's always trying to get you out for a drink on Twitter. Is it ever going to happen?

Yes, absolutely! When the invitation comes through for real and not through a book, I'll go in a flash. I've a feeling, however, he's taking the mickey.

You still have the day job on This Morning. Were you secretly delighted when Kerry Katona was off her face because you knew it was great TV?

I'm great friends with Kerry. She surrounds herself with people who love her now. But there are times when people are on and you think, "I'm not sure you know what you're saying."

The miniaturised Stig was ready for action

Has there ever been a time when you've almost laughed at something awful on This Morning?

Gosh, yes, all the time! We are deeply inappropriate. Holly and I know each other very well, now. She'll know when I'm going to laugh and I know what pushes her buttons, too. It can be a very dangerous combination, that's for sure.

And when you do the cooking segment, have you ever tasted anything really bad and had to put on a brave face?

No. Unless it's couscous or polenta. The chefs know not to put a boiled egg in a meal, too. They're the three things I don't like. Sometimes Gino or Phil Vickery will say, "Ah, but you'll like my polenta." I don't. Those three foods are something I wouldn't eat. Other than that, there have been very few times when I don't like something.

Does working beside someone as hot as Holly Willoughby ever prove distracting?

Ha! It'd be very unprofessional to answer that. We're mates. She's the very attractive sister I never had.

Spill the beans. Are you really always so nice?

No. I have my pet hates and things can make me grumpy. I don't like TV lawyers for starters.

What's the longest you've gone on live TV desperately holding in a wee?

There have been a couple of times on This Morning, when Holly and I both haven't had time to go to the loo, and by the end we're desperate. When I presented the Royal Wedding last year, I didn't have a drink prior to the event or during the whole morning. My kidney was like the Sahara!

When was the last time you were drunk?

Last weekend. We weren't with friends but just at home.

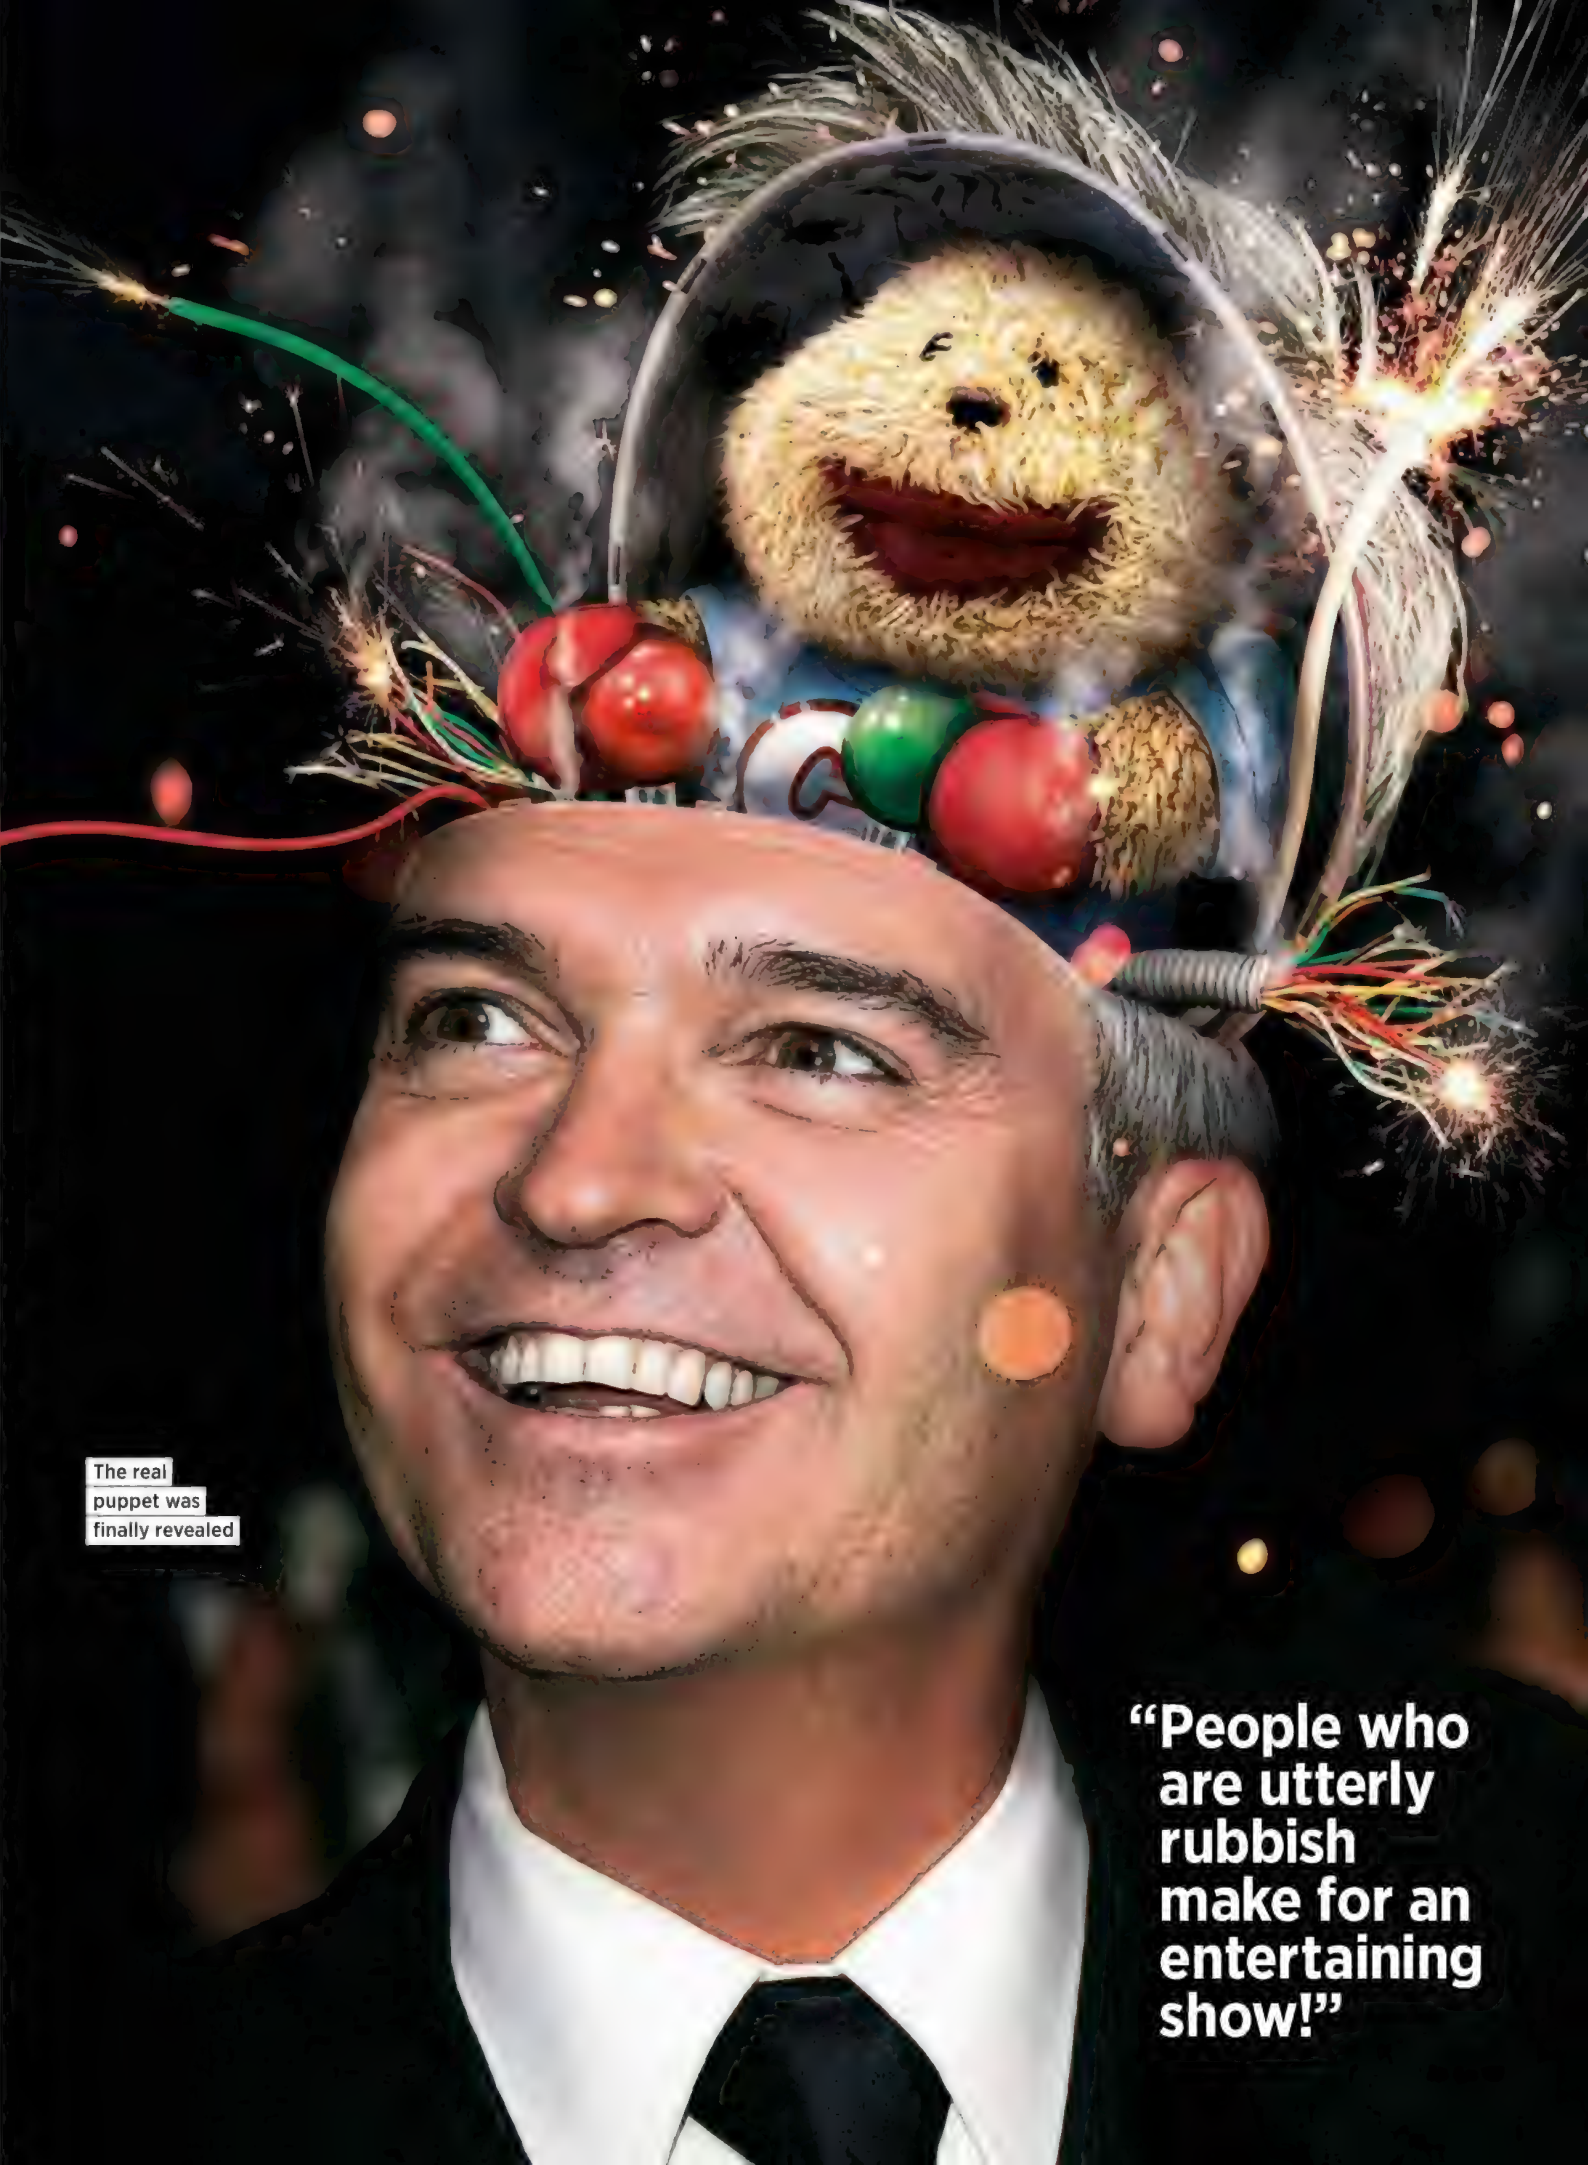

Did your old kids' TV sidekick Gordon the Gopher ever do anything untoward while you were in the broom cupboard?

He's currently in rehab and anything we ever did that was inappropriate would only have been when we were drunk.

Finally, you turned 50 on 1 April. Did you have a boozy blow out?

I didn't celebrate it. I hate the fact that I'm 50 and I made sure I got my wife, Steph, to vet all the cards beforehand to make sure they didn't have 50 on them. I really do hate people even talking about it!

JESSICA-JANE CLEMENT

EXCLUSIVE!

Jessica-Jane Clement!

The gorgeous Real Hustle star in her first shoot of 2012!

Hi Jess! What have you been up to recently?
I've been looking after my two dogs, Knickers and Pants. They mean everything to me and I plan my schedule around them.

Are we going to see you back on telly again soon?

Yes, I have some very exciting projects being worked on at the moment, and I can't wait to tell everyone. Everything I'm working on is very "me". People are going to see more of my personality and realise that I'm a bit loopy loop!

What's an average day in the life of JJC like?

When we all get up, I take the pups out for a walk and then go to the gym. Once I'm back home, I'll shower, moisturise, get my slap on then start the day. I'll either be working on my computer, going to meetings, doing a shoot or tidying my home.

Who are your heroes and villains of 2012 so far?

People have been likening me to Carol Vorderman, so I've been paying more attention to her. She has a fabulous derriere, so for that reason alone she's one of my heroes. Someone sticks out as a villain this year, although I think that word's a little harsh for him. I was sat near Jason Statham in a hotel and there was no one around, so my friend, who was a huge fan, waited until he was leaving and asked for a picture. I was pretty let down when he told her no as it was his day off.

The berk! What one thing is guaranteed to make you laugh?

I'm a sucker for anything cat-related. I'll spend hours YouTubing funny cats. My favourites are when they fall off slippery tables. So cute!

What's the biggest misconception about you?

I'm the least jealous person you'll ever meet, that might ►

I'm obsessed with Bridesmaids at the moment. I love it when they do the penis impression and then they all get the sh*ts in the bridal shop. I have Big Fat Gypsy Weddings on Sky+. And I've bought the new Now 81 album – that'll do me for the next six months.

What car do you drive?

I don't drive any more. I either grab a cab or take the tube. I love the tube – the windows have great reflections to do make-up. The only down side is that there are no bins or toilets. I'll be carrying around my empty Starbucks cup and doing that silly wee walk.

What was the last thing you spent a ridiculous amount of money on?

I've bought some tickets for myself and my mother to go to a motivational seminar. Let's just say that I could have bought a car instead.

What's the best fact you've discovered recently?

I've discovered that Tina Fey from 30 Rock coached "Kevin Gnapoor" on how to rap for the talent-show scene in the movie Mean Girls. I love that film, "All you sucker MCs ain't got nothing on me!" Ha-ha!

What's a guaranteed turn-on?

I've just seen Twilight: Breaking Dawn. The vampire guy will do anything for that Bella lass. That must feel amazing and be a massive turn-on.

What's a guaranteed turn off?

Flashy gits turn me off. The guys you get in West End clubs ordering the bottle of vodka with the sparklers coming out of the top. They look like morons, and act like them too. ►

Any more tattoos planned?

I have a few ideas. If I wasn't doing the job I do, I'd be covered in them. There's an anti-tattoo brigade on Twitter who have a pop. They can kiss my soon-to-be-tattooed arse!

Who do you fancy but know you shouldn't?

The nerdy Spencer guy from Criminal Minds. He looks like he needs to be corrupted. Then he can revamp your website.

Tell us a joke.

There was a joke about me on Sickipedia but it was rubbish. It was something like, "If the men on The Real Hustle are that good, why haven't they found a way to hustle the clothes off Jess?" They obviously hadn't done their research!

When did you last laugh at something you shouldn't have?

My friend was going through a break-up and I'm terrible with bad news – I get the giggles. I laughed, but she did start the conversation with "Jess, something bad has happened, but you're gonna laugh," so she made me do it.

If we went on a night out with you, what could we expect?

You'd be babysitting my dogs while I took the night off and went out with the girls. They're really well behaved, though – the dogs, not the girls!

What's your tipples of choice?

I love mulled wine but it just doesn't feel right drinking it when it's not Christmas.

Do you prefer a night out or a night in?

A night in. I hate it when you're out but want to go home and feel like you have to stay.

We've invited you for dinner.

What should we cook for you?

Whatever you're cooking's fine with me! Except fish. I hate fish. Unless it's fish fingers with lots of ketchup. ✕

AFTER WHAT I SAW IN THE WAR ZONE, NOTHING IN UFC COULD SCARE ME!

BRIAN "CAPTAIN AMERICA" STANN, 31, LEFT THE MARINES FOR A CAREER IN UFC. BUT HE'LL NEVER FORGET THE NIGHT HE WAS AMBUSHED IN IRAQ...

Brian Stann receives the Silver Star for valour

Brian in action in the Octagon

Hi Brian. Were you into combat sports from a young age? I played football and did athletics at high school and college. I was always fascinated by combat, but the opportunity never presented itself.

You enlisted into the US Marine Corps after college. What was your motivation? I grew up in a military environment, so my nature was to take things seriously, which meant I fell out with some people in school. I knew I wanted to go into the forces, and the Marine Corps is the elite arm. It seemed like the place for me.

How was your time in the Marines?

For the most part, it was a tremendous experience. I rose to the rank of infantry officer and took charge of my first platoon in Iraq in 2005 as part of Operation Matador, which took us to the depths of human perseverance. One night, I was leading the platoon to duty when we were ambushed by insurgents. We were hit by roadside bombs, grenades and then a car bomb destroyed the recovery tank that was hauling some of my wounded colleagues. We managed to get out without any fatalities, but it was a rough battle that I'll never forget.

You were awarded the Silver Star [the third highest accolade in the US military] for bravery during Operation Matador. That must've been a proud moment.

It's two-sided – sure, I was proud, but people were seriously wounded during the time I made the actions for which I got that award. There's a young man who'll never walk again, and another who has endured three brain surgeries. I look back and wonder, what if I'd done things differently? Maybe nobody would've got hurt. Unfortunately, as a military officer, you have to live with things like that. You know the deal when you sign up and take the job.

At what stage did you take up MMA?

I began training in hand-to-hand combat in the Marine Corps. Suddenly, I was introduced to wonderful techniques like jujitsu and muay thai, and I was hooked. I started training for MMA every evening after a day of military training, juggling my work as an officer by sleeping in my office to save travelling time.

Did you ever believe you'd make it to the Ultimate Fighting Championship?

I always watched UFC and thought it'd be cool to one day fight those top guys, but I never believed I'd actually achieve that. I remember my first amateur fight – at that stage I'd only mastered three punches and two kicks, but I still managed to TKO my opponent in the first round.

How does the mentality needed for fighting in a war zone compare to fighting in the Octagon?

One thing I struggled with initially was making the transition from being a leader of a team to being an individual. A great MMA fighter needs to be selfish, to look out for number one at all times. I wasn't used to that.

At what stage did you decide that it was time to concentrate on MMA as a full-time career?

When my first daughter was born. Having grown up without a father, I didn't want that for my children. In the Marines, I faced eight months away each year, and I wasn't prepared to do that any more. I'm predisposed to withstand and endure all sorts of pain, but the one thing I cannot handle is missing my wife and kids.

Brian Stann facts:

- Brian was born at the Yokota Air Base, Japan: "I lived there until I was two."
- Brian's bravery was noted in a speech by then-President George W Bush in 2006.
- Brian achieved a black belt within the Marine Corps Martial Arts Program.
- In 2008, Brian became World Extreme Cagefighting light-heavyweight champion.
- Brian is currently ranked tenth in the UFC's middleweight division
- Brian has a plan: "I'm a year away from being the best fighter I can be."

How did the Marine Corps react to you competing in MMA?

My battalion commander was all for it, but when my fights were first nationally televised, the military lawyers suddenly sat up and took notice. I had to compile a declaration stating that I would conduct myself to the highest standards of an officer at all times while on camera. I also agreed that I would not qualify for the Marine Corps' insurance policy if I was injured while fighting, which I was more than happy to do.

What impact have your Marine Corps experiences had on your fighting career?

They shaped me as a person. Watching my platoon risk their lives for one another was the most intense and inspirational thing that I'll ever see. Some UFC fighters talk about the fear they endure before going into the Octagon, but that doesn't come into it for me. After everything I experienced at war, the fear of an MMA fight is like water off a duck's back. I could never be concerned about an outcome that only pertains to myself – what's the worst that can happen? I could lose, my pride could be dented, I could be injured. None of that compares. Nothing in UFC is ever going to hurt as much as looking a mother in the eyes and telling her you didn't manage to bring her son home from war. ✕

SKY SPORTS1/HD • 7pm

A home banker, right? Well, maybe not. Wigan have improved a great deal of late, and the pie eaters have previous form for shocking Arsenal – it's almost exactly two years since they came from 2-0 down to win 3-2 late on. We suspect Arsene Wenger hasn't looked at a certain baked pastry-based dish since.

"Why, thank you. I use L'Oréal, because I'm worth it."

Game Of Thrones

SKY ATLANTIC/HD • 9pm

A Tyrion Lannister-focused episode, which is fine by us, as Peter Dinklage makes for excellent viewing (almost as good as he was in Elf). As Hand of the King (formerly the now-headless Ned Stark) Tyrion is on a mission to weed out the bad eggs in his King's court, while Catelyn Stark tries to unite Houses against the Lannisters.

NEW SERIES!

Beavis And Butt-Head

MTV • 10pm

After 15 years, the teenage slacker pals are back to sit in front of their telly and "huh-huh, heh-heh" their way through music videos, as well as newer stuff like UFC and Jersey Shore. And if you're new to this and that doesn't sound funny, try it. It is.

DARA O'BRIAIN'S SCHOOL OF HARD SUMS

We're fans of Dara, but this maths show about solving problems like "the most pizza slices you can get if you can only cut it three times" is a rubbish idea.

CSI: Crime Scene Investigation

CHANNEL 5/HD • 9pm

More brilliantly over-the-top murders for the team to solve, and since Ted Danson has taken over as the big boss, we've found we're enjoying the show that much more. This time, a carnival woman nicknamed the "Empress Of Pain" is found elaborately murdered.

CHANNEL 4/HD • 10pm

Some of Kayvan Novak's alter-egos can be a bit pants, but the awesomeness of Cockney rogue Terry Tibbs more than makes up for it. This week he's hosting a Jerry Springer-style talk show, which means he's going to be upsetting loads of unsuspecting Yanks, and saying things like, "Talk to me" a lot!

Hit The Road Jack

CHANNEL 4 • 10.30pm

Nuts was actually in the audience when Jack Whitehall hit Bristol, where his guests were David Walliams and rapper Example. The best bit is where he pretends to be local artist Banksy and graffiti's local houses, whose occupants don't seem to like it.

Chelsea vs Barcelona

ITV1/HD • 7.30pm

After scraping past Benfica, Chelsea face the small matter of a Champions League semi-final against the holders. If temporary boss Roberto Di Matteo has designs on landing the job permanently, seeing off Messi and co wouldn't be a bad idea. Good luck!

The Apprentice

BBC ONE/HD • 9pm

With the growing popularity of fitness crazes like Zumba (which we still think is essentially raving for middle-aged women), Lord Sugar asks his budding business bods to devise a new keep-fit trend. Look out for one of the teams grossly misjudging their market with hilarious consequences. Oh, how we love it when they fail!

Sons Of Anarchy

SUSA • 10pm

It's the last in the series, and Clay's life lies in the hands of Jax. But the decision to take him out once and for all isn't a simple one. Jax can possibly do a deal with some newly revealed CIA ops to save Bobby from the slammer, but for that to happen, Clay must live. One thing's for sure, though – he's out of the club forever.

2 Broke Girls

E4/HD • 9pm

If you've watched New Girl with the missus and guffawed (or just smiled) at its obvious girlish charm, you might like to sample this new offering. A waitress meets her new colleague, who's a former rich girl, and together the pair from different worlds come up with a business plan. It's an amusing new Yank comedy.

Russell Howard's Good News

BBC THREE • 9pm

The bug-eyed funnyman puts the week's news under his comedy microscope in a bid to make the nation smile. It's not exactly been a "laugh a minute" news agenda recently, so anyone who can find happy stuff in it deserves a pat on the back!

House

SKY1/HD • 10pm

The scalpel-wielding grump and his team have a particularly unusual case to deal with this week, when they treat a patient whose tears are made of blood! CONFESSION OF THE WEEK!

'She felt my wet knickers'

IT WAS a friend's hen night and we were all dressed as bunny girls. I noticed one of the girls smiling at me a lot. I went to the toilet to put some slap on and adjust my bunny ears when she walked in and told me she had something to tell me. We raced into a cubicle and she kissed me. Her lips and tongue were really gentle. She slid her fingers up my outfit and when she felt my knickers were wet she let out a little moan. She crouched down and I felt her tongue on my clit and tried not to scream. It didn't take long before I came!

'Our naughty boat ride'

THE WEATHER has been glorious the past few weeks and last weekend my boyfriend had the idea of taking a rowing boat out on the lake of a local park.

I thought it was a romantic idea and decided to dress to impress. I wore a tiny floral mini dress with little straps that could come down easily. He rowed away taking in the sights with me lounging back in the boat giving him cheeky looks. As soon as we were out of sight of the families and kids, I slowly leant forward, unzipped the fly on his long shorts and pulled his c*ck out. I started stroking him as we floated along, stopping every time he got close. Desperately horny, we pulled into a thick part of some bushes and I went down on him slowly, licking his tip and glancing up at him. He couldn't take any more and pulled me on top, almost toppling the boat. I rode away and we both came. Afterwards, we realised we were really late and had to row back quickly. The owner innocently asked, "Did you have a good time?"

'We went to a nudist beach'

I RECENTLY went on holiday to Tenerife with a girlfriend of mine. On our second day, we decided to go to a nudist beach. After flirting with some boys for a few hours, I went for a walk with a hot guy and we went for a dip. We had a bit of a snog in the sea and my hands instantly reached down for his erection. After a bit of fumbling we were both really horny and wanted to get stuck in. We swam to the water's edge, making sure nobody could see, and he sat back while I gave him a blow job. He then lay completely flat so I could straddle him and we soon got hot and sweaty in the baking sun.

Janet via email

'I slowly rubbed him'

AFTER I'D had a few drinks with my girlfriends one night, my man picked us up. I sat in the front and my two pals crashed out in the back. He told me how sexy I looked and his hand wandered to my thigh and gave it a squeeze. I reciprocated by easing my hand towards his crotch. He gave me a huge grin and I felt the bulge in his trousers grow rock hard. I unzipped his fly and slipped my hand inside his jeans. I slowly rubbed and stroked him until his breathing got so heavy that one of my friends woke up. I turned to look at her and she smiled but said nothing – the fact that she knew what we were doing made me even hornier. We dropped the girls off and raced home to finish what we'd started.

Nuts SPORT

FA Cup semi-final special!

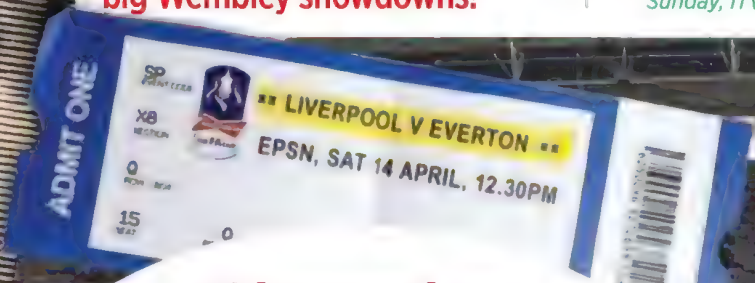

FA Cup winner Merse on the big Wembley showdowns!

IT'S FA Cup semi-final weekend and there are two big derbies ahead. Liverpool take on Everton, while Spurs face Chelsea.

To see who'll reach the final on 5 May, we spoke to Nuts legend and FA Cup winner Paul Merson!

- Everton vs Liverpool, Saturday, ESPN/HD, 12.30pm. Chelsea vs Spurs, Sunday, ITV1/HD, 6pm

"Liverpool are on a terrible run!"

"Liverpool's confidence is shot. Kenny Dalglish will be under massive pressure to get a result but I don't think he's 90 minutes away from getting the sack - he'll be given more time to get things right. The Reds are a big-game team but they're also paceless and too many of their signings haven't done the business."

"Everton will suffocate Liverpool!"

"Everton will try to stop Steven Gerrard and Luis Suarez from playing their normal game. David Moyes won't make the mistakes he made at Anfield in March and will play his strongest side. The Blues are in form and I just fancy them to make the final. It'll be very cagey and will probably go to penalties."

Verdict 1-1
Everton on penalties

"Get off me!
I don't have split ends!"

"Spurs have so much pace!"

"Spurs will absolutely love playing on Wembley's expansive pitch. Gareth Bale and Aaron Lennon will fancy their chances against the Chelsea full-backs and I expect Emmanuel Adebayor to give John Terry and Gary Cahill all sorts of problems. Tottenham will be the fresher team and I think Harry's boys will make the final."

"Chelsea have a fixture problem!"

"Chelsea are desperate to finish in the top four and have to face Barcelona in the Champions League three days after this. The FA and Premier League must do more to help teams with fixture congestion. I'm not sure Roberto Di Matteo will play his first team. They won't want extra-time!"

Verdict 3-1
to Spurs

"Argh, careful! I've got a really sensitive spot just there!"

KAMMY!

He's the voice of the fans – and he's only in Nuts!

"I suppose
I might as well
score then"

Chelsea can beat Barca!

Underdog tag will suit Di Matteo and his in-form side!

➔ IT SEEMS everyone, not least Jose Mourinho, thinks Barcelona are already in the Champions League final, but they're making a big mistake to write off Chelsea so readily. The match against Pep Guardiola's side is a no-lose situation for the Blues – no one expected them to get this far and no one expects them to win, so the pressure's off.

Many of Chelsea's team have faced Barca several times and know how to play against the Catalans. I was at the Nou Camp last week to see Messi and co beat AC Milan and if I was to report back to Roberto Di Matteo, I'd tell the manager to put David Luiz on Lionel Messi. He has the energy and pace to stick to the Argentine and will have enough left in the tank to make a contribution going forward.

Whatever happens, we are in for a treat. Come on, Chelsea – stick it to 'em!

I wish top man Stan all the best

I WAS shocked to hear of Stiliyan Petrov's bad news and wish the Villa man all the best in his battle against leukaemia. I've met Stan a few times and he's a true gent and a top bloke. He always has time for everyone and I know the whole of football is behind him.

If one good thing has come out of the Fabrice Muamba situation, it's that every footballer is now more aware of their health. It was because of the Bolton man's cardiac arrest that Villa decided to screen their players, and Stan's illness was picked up.

All the best, mate. I look forward to seeing you in action again soon.

Stiliyan Petrov, who is battling acute leukaemia

KAMMY'S UNBELIEVABLE-OMETER™

UNBELIEVABLY GOOD!

DE-GEA DELIGHT!
David de Gea is getting used to his shared goal at the right side. The Spaniard's willing use to the physicality of the Premier League and has made some wonderful saves of late.

UNBELIEVABLY BAD!

SILLY CHAMAKH!
Marouane Chamakh hasn't had the best of times at Arsenal and I was surprised to see him smoking a shisha pipe with Adel Taarabt after the QPR game.

THE BIG MATCH!

"Oof, I knew these cycling shorts would be too tight"

Flamingo fun for leeds!

WHAT BETTER way to improve morale than a day trip to Flamingo Land? Neil Warnock took his Leeds side to the theme park for some team bonding and it looks like they had a pretty decent time. Only Neil would come up with something like that – he's a top man but can be a little eccentric at times. I'm just annoyed I didn't get an invite!

"So this is the club vehicle I was promised?"

Man United vs Aston Villa

15 APR, 4PM • Sky Sp1/HD

As always, Fergie's lads are hitting form at the business end of the season and Villa certainly won't fancy a trip to Old Trafford. Alex McLeish's men still need another two wins to banish the prospect of relegation. It's getting very tight at the bottom of the league!

KAMMY'S PREDICTION: 3-0

Key man

Antonio Valencia has been outstanding of late and has benefited from Nani's injury. He scores goals and gets assists galore. Watch out, Villa!

DRAW KAMMY!

ELAINE HARSHAW sent in this cracking drawing of yours truly. Many thanks Elaine – I've never looked so handsome. I like the suit too – very sharp!

1 GIDDY UP... GIDDY DOWN!

When your horse falls flat on its face at the first fence, throw something at the TV, curse your mate's "can't fail" tip and down a pint.

2 BOOZY BALDING

Every time BBC host Clare Balding appears on your screen, just drink something. Wine, beer, gin... Anything. It doesn't matter what!

Grand National drinking game!

Glasses at the ready, it's going to get messy!

YOU'VE ENTERED the office sweepstake, been down the bookies, and you're ready to watch the world famous horse race – all you need now is to get the booze in and invite your mates round for some messy mayhem! But please get drunk responsibly.

● Grand National, Saturday 14 April, 4.15pm, BBC1/HD

What you need to play!

Beer • Red wine • Rum
Whisky • Tequila
Vodka • Bar snacks

RED-FACED RUM PUNCH

Whenever legendary three-time National winner Red Rum is mentioned, drink one glass of red wine followed by a rum chaser.

THE BRENT BLASTER

If the office idiot's horse in the sweepstake comes in first, have a straight whisky and send the plonker an offensive text message.

BIG SHAK-A-TTACK!

Every time 16-1 shot Shakalakaboomboom is mentioned, have two tequila slammers – and make sure you have a vom bucket handy.

SWEET MELL OF SUCCESS

Each time they cross the Melling Road, have a few mouthfuls of crisps, nuts or pub snacks. To soak up all that booze, of course.

THE SADDLE BAGGER

If a rider-less horse crosses the finishing line first, down every drink you have left in the house. And then call an ambulance.

MAD MAN CHALLENGE!

When it's all over, drink a shot of vodka multiplied by the odds of the winner – just pray the winner isn't a 100-1 rank outsider!

Kentucky Wildcats basketball team forward TERRENCE JONES must be a clever boy. If you're going to fall anywhere, make sure it's onto a group of nice, soft cheerleaders. Good work, Terrence!

"Quote me on that!"

This week's biggest match debaters!

GRACE DEISSROTH of the Philadelphia Flyers Ice Girls shows hockey isn't really second to the NFL and NBA. We'd take her down the rink any time.

TRABZONSPOR fans protest against the match-fixing scandal in Turkey – by throwing their undies on the pitch!

"We had to show three sides to our game – character, power, pace and quality"

Alan Pardew can't count.

"Joint-wise, I feel great"

Michael Owen's just smokin'.

"I've never been in a mass brawl. I've started a few though"

Robbie Savage is a twisted fighter.

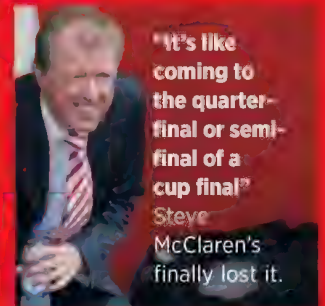

"Peter Crouch is 6ft 100 inches"

Paul Merson has a dodgy tape measure.

"It's like coming to the quarter-final or semi-final of a cup final"

Steve McClaren's finally lost it.

"My big fat head will get spotted in Leeds"

And he's a Leeds fan.

OO-ER SOUNDS A BIT RUDE CORNER!

Pub ammo on... the Grand National

- The first winner of the National, in 1839, was a horse called Lottery.
- In 1928, Tipperary Tim, a 100-1 outsider, came first of two horses to finish the race.
- So far, the best finish by a female jockey has been fifth place, achieved in both 1994 and 2005.
- French-bred horses have only won four times, perhaps because horses have other uses in France.
- The John Smith's Grand National takes place at Aintree on Saturday. Visit Aintree.co.uk for info.
